

A tradition of excellence in deck machinery
design and manufacture for 160 years

Although Thomas Reid is one of the oldest names in deck machinery design and manufacture nothing has changed in the management philosophy that continues to drive the company forward in the present day. The principals of excellent design and the highest quality manufacturing standards ensure our equipment continues to provide the best possible performance over a long service life.

Our deck machinery, which includes winches and windlasses, anchor and warping capstans, replenishment at sea winches, and superyacht anchor and warping equipment, is fitted to naval, commercial and leisure vessels the world over. In addition we have for many years provided highly specialised equipment for naval vessels, such as Frigates and Minesweepers.

We work very closely, from the earliest stages of a vessels construction, with naval architects, shipbuilders and project management teams to ensure our equipment meets the highest possible performance expectations, with final testing to Lloyds exacting requirements prior to delivery. When in service the provision of spares, servicing, overhauls and upgrades are available worldwide.
